—A few drummers slip in and out without paying license to do business. It is a difficult matter to detect them, the merchants to whom they sell goods not desiring to give them away, or to meddle in the matter. The worst of it is the drummer also cludes the police, and when he goes to another city brags of his adroitness in escaping the license tax of Memphis. The house for which the drummer works is, of course, not charged up with the license tax; but it looks reasonable to suppose that a drummer who violates the law of any city will make his employer pay the license tax all the same.

The Rochester astronomical society announces that the comet discovered by Professor Swift, on Sunday last, promises to become very brilliant. It is coming almost straight toward the earth, and so its position in the heavens changes slowly. It is in the constellation Pegasus, which is overhead at about 9 o'clock in the evening. It seems to be throwing off a brilliant tail, which will become visible to the naked eye as it swings into the neighborhood of the sun. If this comet fulfills its present promise, it will be a magnificent object in the coming winter evenings. Some of the astronomers, it seems, suspect that this may be the great comet that blazed with extraordinary splender in the western sky just before the war of 1812. FORT PICKERING M. E. In reputation for fine printing and bookbinding, the firm of Tracy & Co., of our city, seems to be rapidly gaining deserved prominence throughout the southern country; and even in northern cities their work has long since received most complimentary mention. The invitations gotten up by Tracy for the late "hop" given by the Bluff City Grays were greatly admired. The style and execution were admirable.
